The following list contains records of Casual and Accidental birds recorded in the Vancouver Checklist Area. The Checklist Area covers Greater Vancouver and its vicinity from the International Boundary (but including Point Roberts, Washington) north to 49° 35' N (including Furry Creek), west to the middle of the Strait of Georgia and Howe Sound (including Bowen Island), east to 122° 33' W (Bradner Road & 288th St.) in Abbotsford, Aldergrove and Maple Ridge, but including all of Golden Ears Provincial Park. The Vancouver Checklist has a total of 413 species, 169 breeding species, 140 species seen less than once per year with 10 introduced and 9 extirpated species. Confirmed records appear first and are documented either by photographs, specimens, tape recordings or by written field notes (FN). Accepted records seen by a single observer are treated as a sight record (sr). There are 30 species on the list that are under the category of Hypothetical because they are either currently under review or haven't fully been documented as a definitive record in the region. Below each species name is a list of records showing confirmed records then any Hypothetical records for that species. The casual and accidental records listed include historical records, including specimens, cited observations, photographed records and accepted sightings found in the literature about BC Birds. This List is a general synopsis of occurrence and should be interpreted as such. Where there are more than 20 records of a particular species, I have tried to add a little extra information. I wish to thank the hard work of the following people who compiled information over the past decades and made researching this list possible: Bill Hughes, R. Wayne Campbell, Mike Shepard, John Toochin, Wayne Weber, Brian Kautesk, Richard Cannings, Michael Force, John Dorsey, Tom Plath, Brian Self, Alexis Harrington and John Chandler. I wish to thank past and present members of Nature Vancouver (Vancouver Natural History Society), local, and out-of-town birders who have contributed sightings over the decades. These people made the creation of this document possible. I would also like to acknowledge the help of George Clulow and Eric Greenwood for without their help this document could not have been completed. A list of references and a complete list of contributors to this list are provided at the end of the document. If you have any comments, additional observations or questions please e-mail me.

Rare Species but Annual Species in the Vancouver Checklist Area:

The following species are rare in the Vancouver Checklist Area. There is usually at least one report a year and in some years multiple sightings. There are a few species that have historically bred or still do breed locally in the Checklist Area. An asterisks mark these species *. Many of the species on this list occur in a narrow time period making them hard to find and often in a very selective habitat. These birds should always be documented when encountered, as they are rare at anytime of year in the Vancouver Checklist Area.

List on Document of Accidental / Casual Species

The following species are considered casual or accidental in the Vancouver Checklist Area. These species are very unusual to the region. To be considered a species of casual occurrence there have been between 2-10 records historically, often occurring at a particular time of year but they occur less than once or in some cases a few times in a ten year period. In the case of an accidental species there is often only a single record or at most a couple of records with the occurrences of a species going several decades or much longer before reoccurring. These species are considered extremely unusual in the Vancouver area and are always in need of documentation. There are a few species that have historically bred but are now extirpated from the Vancouver Checklist Area (or in other words extinct in the local region). An asterisks * followed by a [X] symbol after the birds name define which birds fall in this category. In a few cases there were species introduced to the Vancouver Checklist Area and for a time were successful. These species also have an [I] beside them marking that they were introduced to the region. In some cases there are species that are suspected to be breeding or have bred in the past in the region but to date there has been no nest found. These species have an asterisk in brackets (*) after the species name. For any casual or accidental species to be put on this list they are considered far out of range, extremely rare in the defined Vancouver Checklist Area or in a few cases the species were once easily found in our region but due to ecological changes are now almost impossible to find in the region. These birds should always be documented when encountered, as they are extremely unusual at any time of year in the Vancouver Checklist Area.

Spotted Owl (Strix occidentalis): (almost extirpated: extremely rare resident)

Prior to 1999 there were still a few pairs left in the local watersheds of this very rare species.

Though a few are resident in the watersheds it is almost never encountered anywhere else in the Vancouver Checklist Area. With the collapse of the BC population and the species inevitable extinction in Canada future records appear unlikely. A recent survey of previous held territories in the watersheds has failed to turn up any current sightings of this species. They may well have become extirpated due to habitat loss and competition with Barred Owls (D. Tyson pers. Comm.).
